£500,000 invested digital assets and mapped applications

Jonathan Bostock has been involved in investing over £500,000 in Birmingham and the region's future by creating a platform for the seamless collection and processing of digital community generated content.

He has invested in the build of a trademarked white label digital space where people can engage and be involved. This product is called Community Passport.

This was used to engage community in growing the largest repository of community generated content.

This content has been published on maps, now viewed over 2.7 million times.

Digital products that can be employed on public transport to increase visitors and help the region's cultural and hospitality sector are ready for beta testing.

This work can continue to grow economic wealth for Birmingham and the region, attracting investors, increasing visitors and increasing real estate value by up to 5%.

This investment now needs a home that can continue to grow pride in the places people live in and grow up in, ensuring shared prosperity, well integrated social housing and cohesive communities.

Community
Passport[®]

The product and the IP

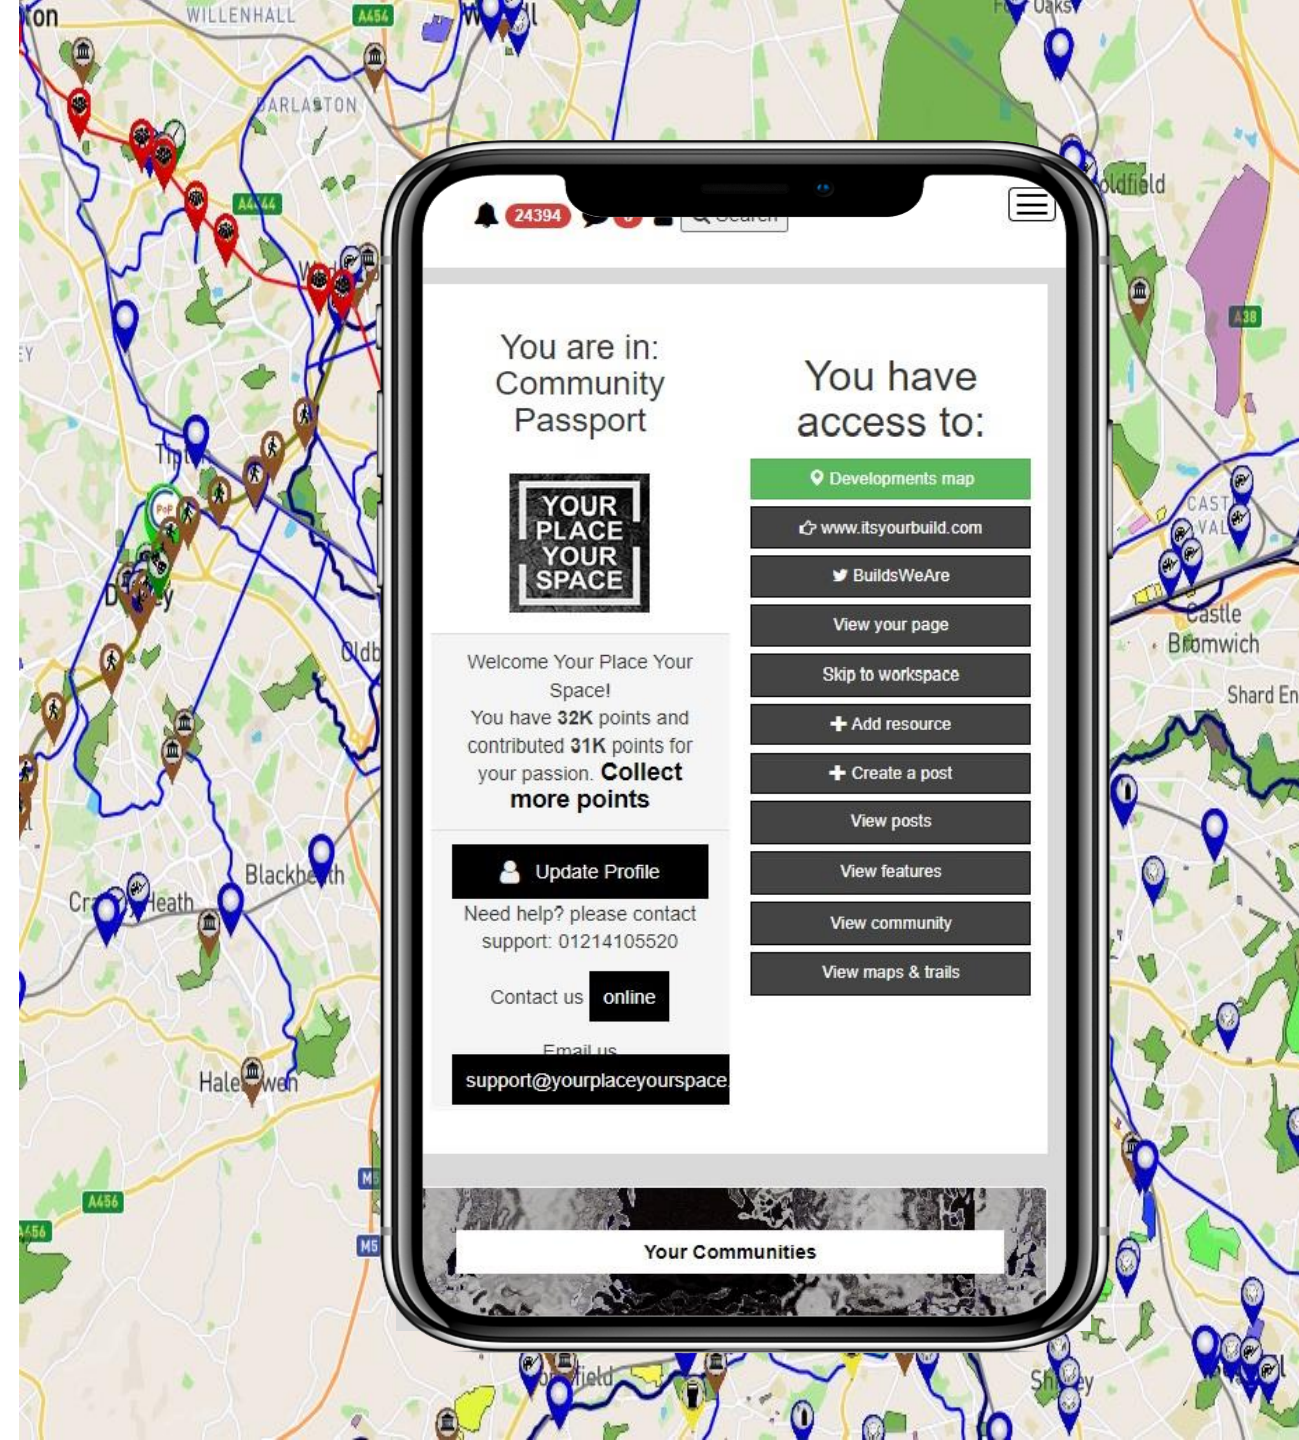

A white-label digital product has been built for any business, developer, community network, local/regional government or any alliance to use for engaging and involving customers and/or residents in the shaping and promotion of places for nurturing pride of place.

This trade-marked digital product is called:

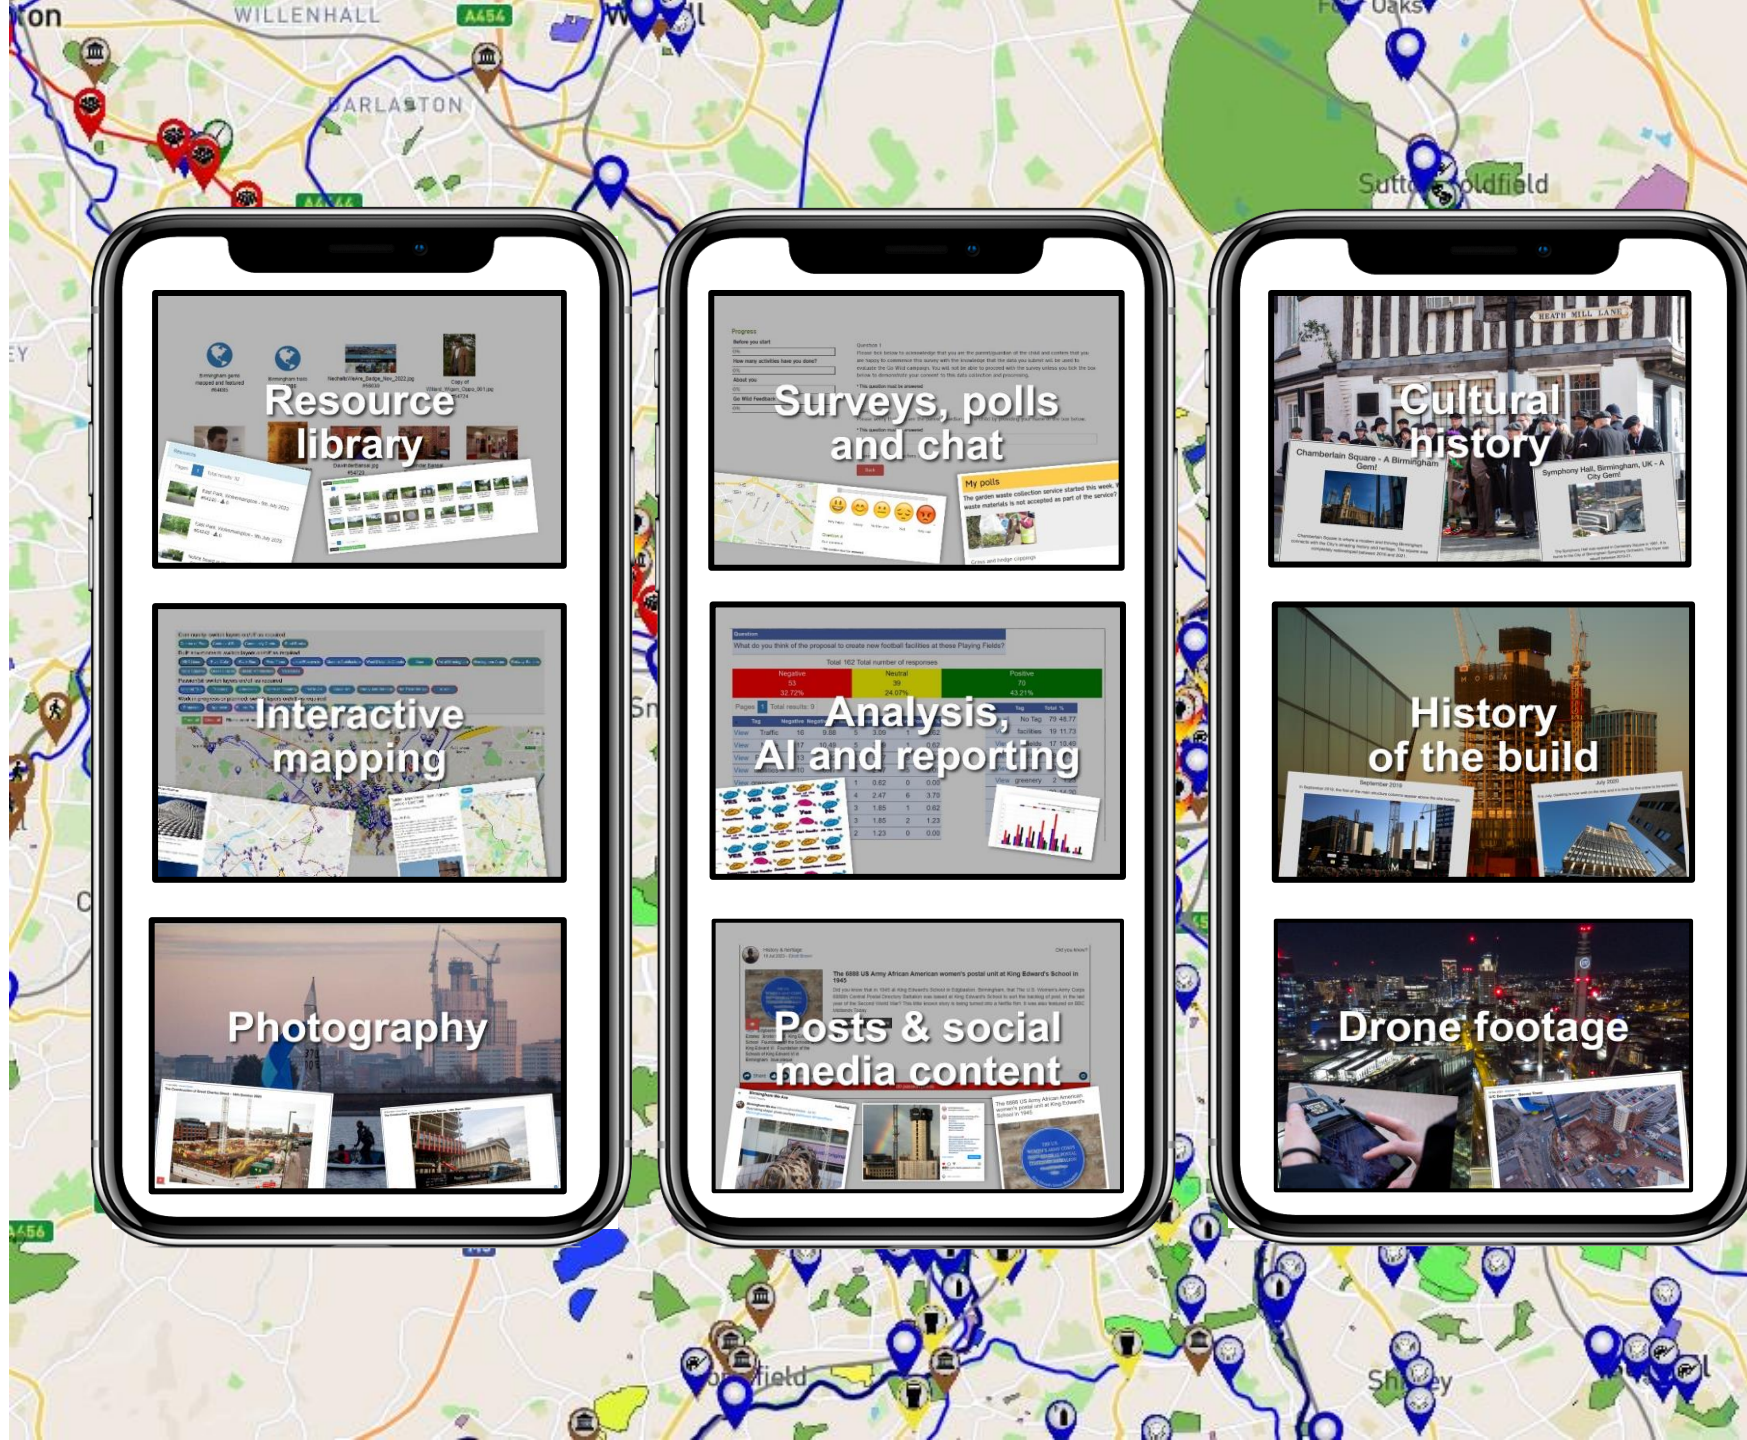

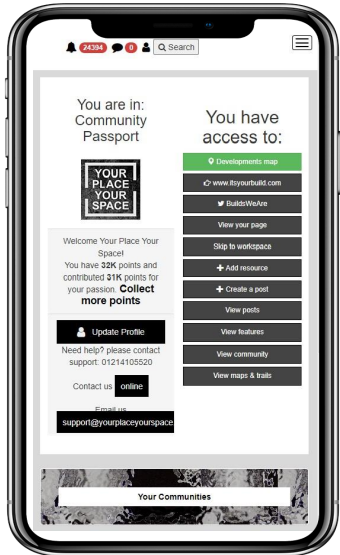

Community Passport TM

Community Passport comes with the option of deploying gamification or any form of digital currency as recognition for the contributions made by customers and residents who sign up as regular providers of digital content and wish to be engaged and involved.

How it works:

The complete package:

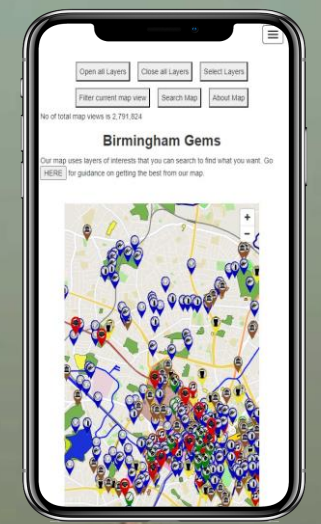

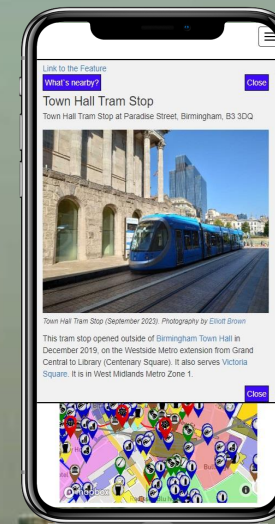

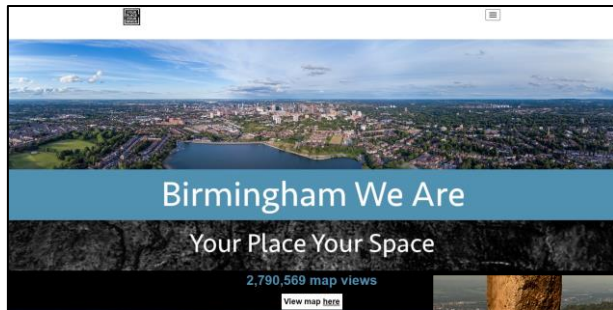

Birmingham's most comprehensive and regularly updated repository of digital content now scaling across the region.

Features; maps viewed between 60,000 and 100,000 every month; trails; galleries; multiple branded platforms; full social media support.

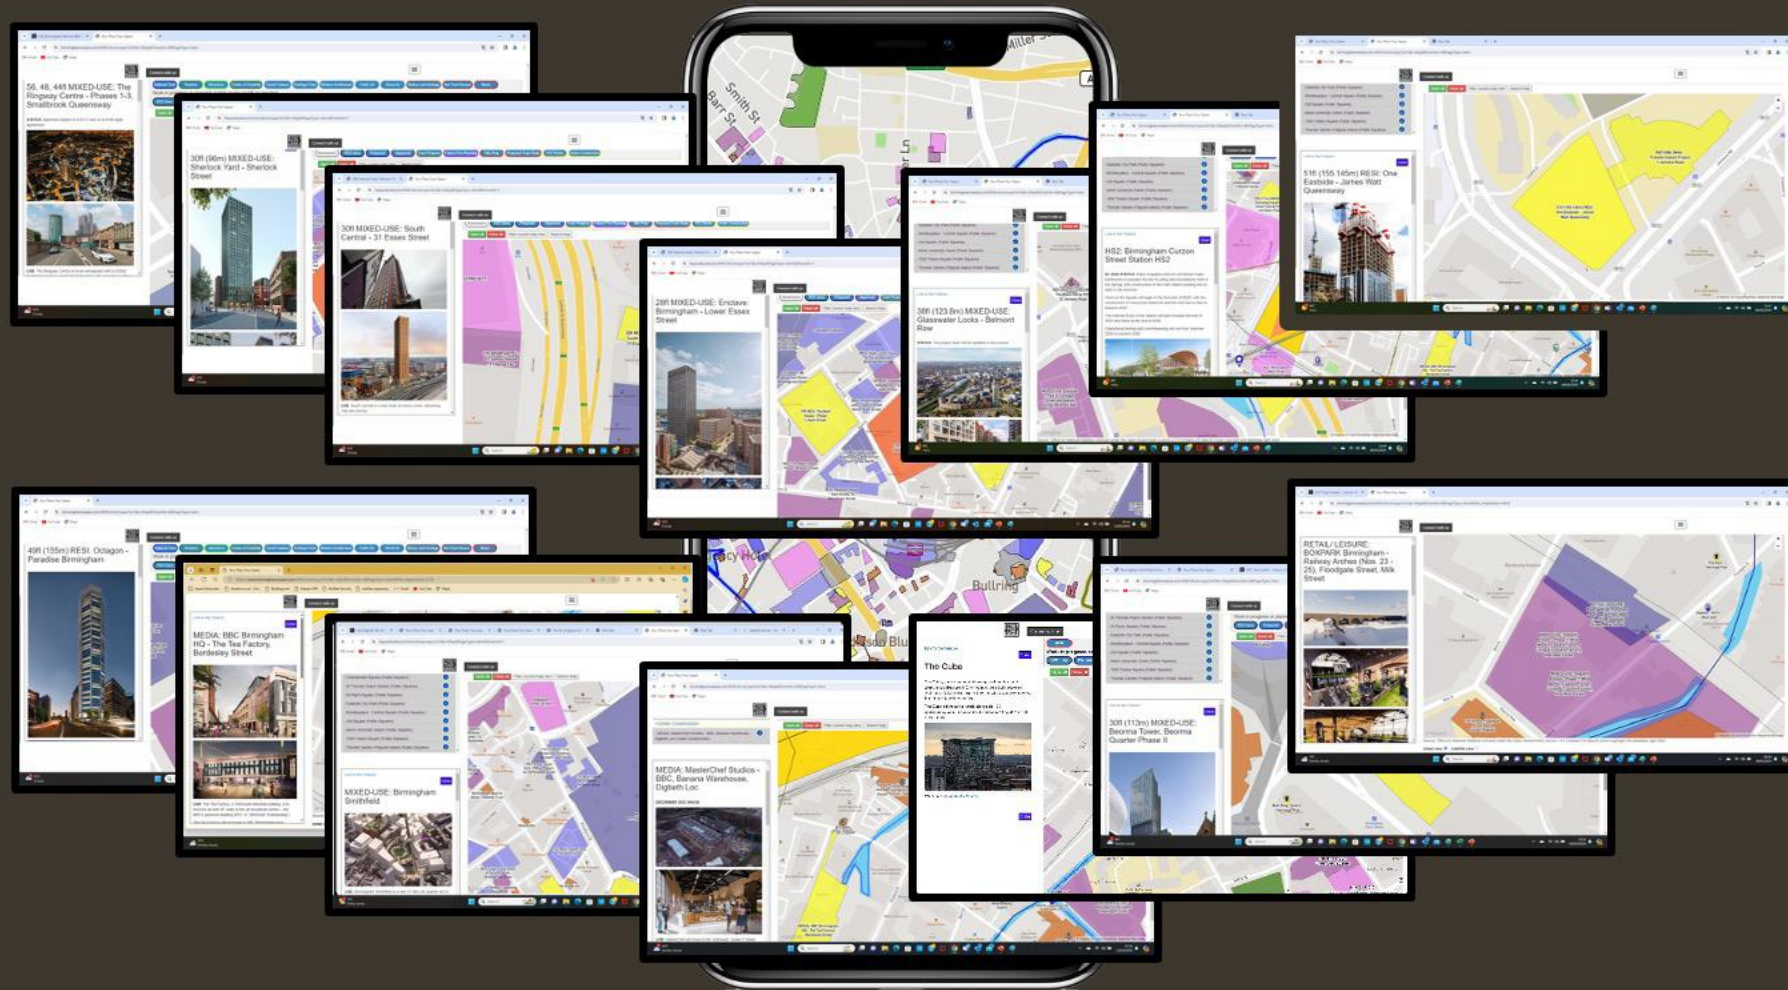

Regularly updated content held in an accessible and searchable resource library with a community engaged, connected and empowered to continue to create and share more.

Options for growing revenue include:

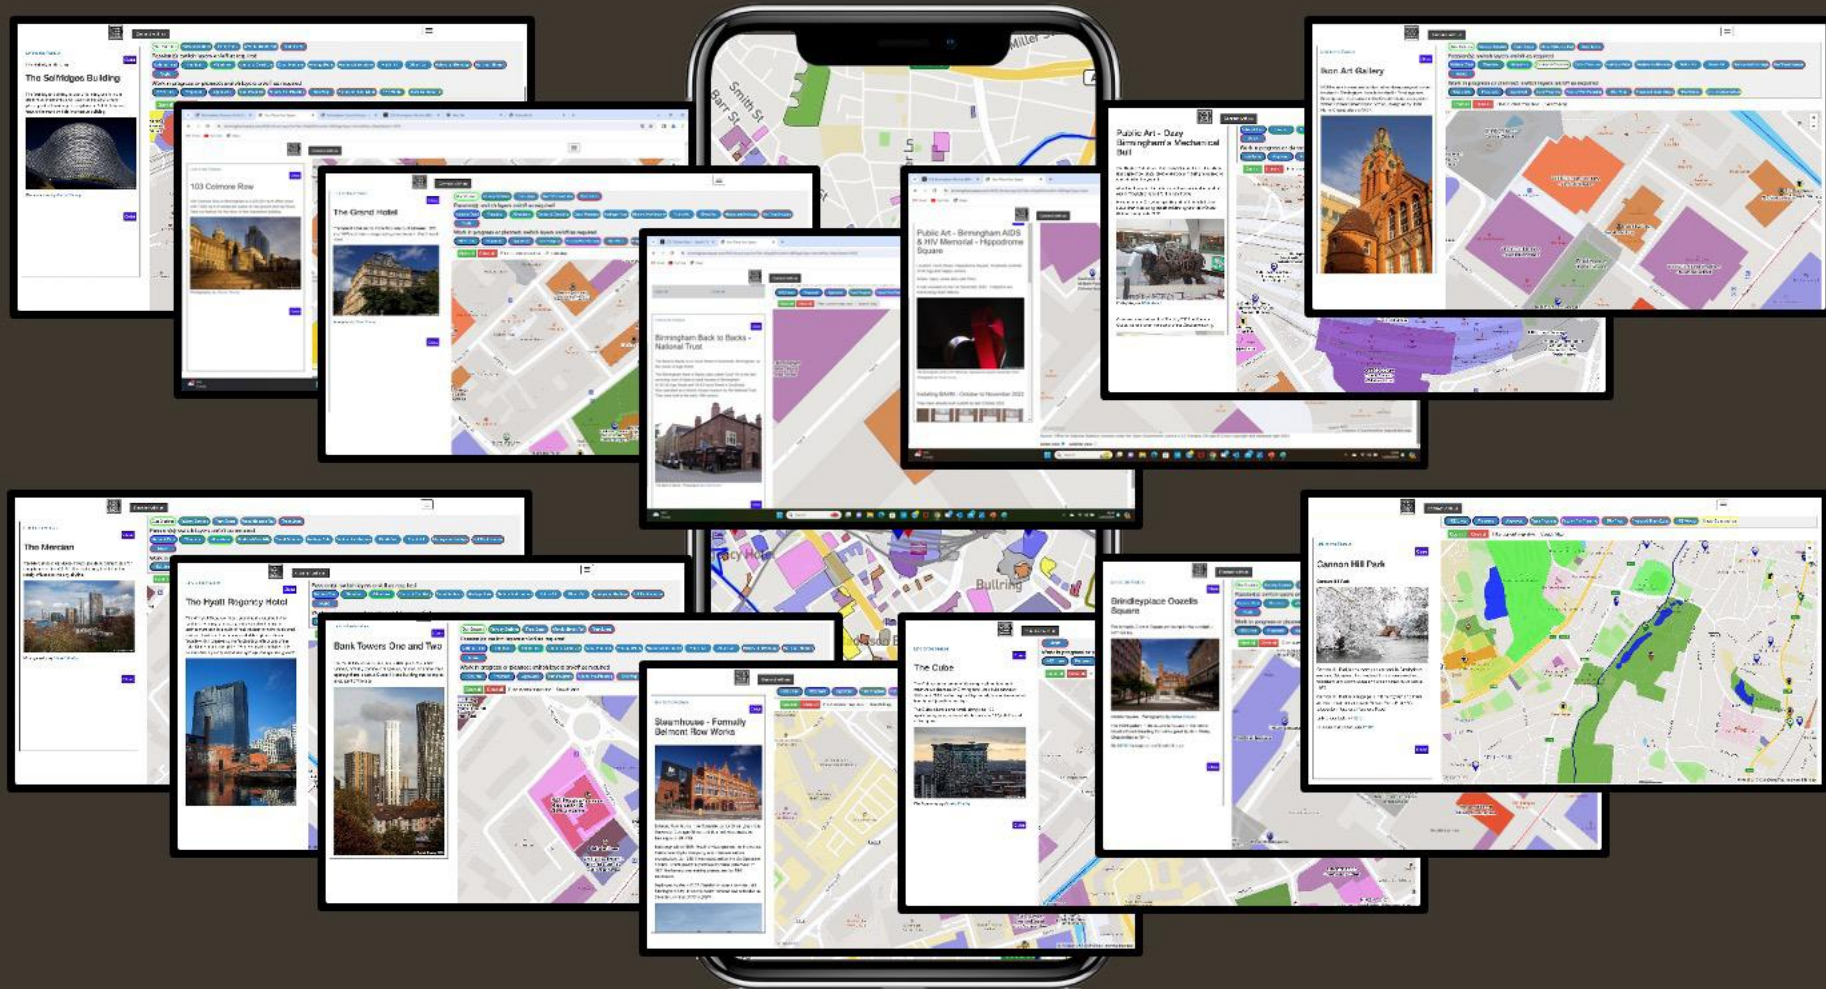

- License agreements.
- Branding.
- Corporate sponsorships.
- Advertising.
- Scaling into other regions.
- Digital applications.

All of Birmingham's infrastructure is mapped and showcased

All of Birmingham's amazing culture is now mapped and showcased

Application: Real estate

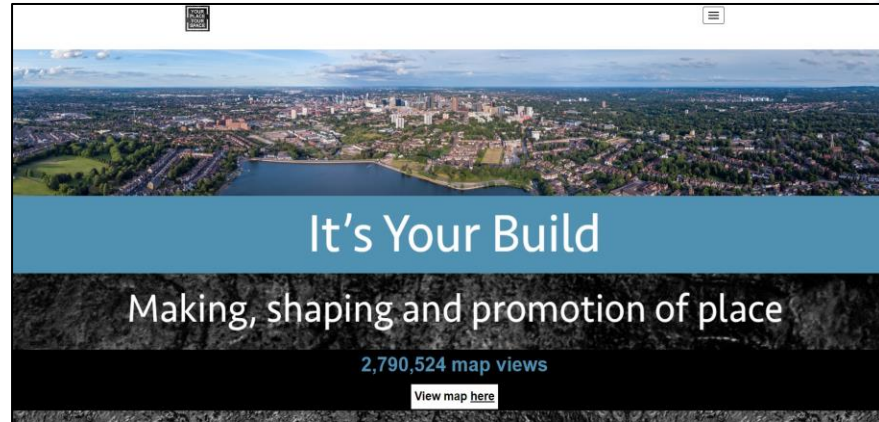

Digital coverage of real estate supporting a 5% increase in real estate value.

With a community engaged and empowered, the one and only interactive platform and map of Birmingham's real estate and infrastructure has been built.

Every month, maps of the city are viewed between 60,000 and 100,000. To date maps have been viewed over 2.8 million times.

This can now be rolled out across the region.

Other data sources can be added.
